ANNUAL REPORT 2016

During the year under review Heritage Malta sustained the upbeat momentum and to some extent surpassed the noteworthy achievements of 2015.

Besides the inauguration of three major infrastructural projects, two of which co-funded by the EU, and a major exhibition to commemorate the 450th anniversary of the foundation of Valletta, Heritage Malta also managed to register a record in the number of visitors and in the generation of revenue for the fourth year in a row.

The Agency's output comprised also the biggest-ever number of cultural activities, and an impressive outreach programme including thematic sessions for school children and publications.

CAPITAL WORKS

During the year under review works at the Malta Maritime Museum continued with the restoration of the lateral façade and apertures, the structural consolidation of the turrets, and the refurbishment of the St Angelo Hall and kitchen. Catering equipment was also bought to upgrade the kitchen operational capabilities. The office and library upgrades also continued, including a new board room and two sealed reserve collection areas. Further investment was also made in the functions spaces at Fort St Angelo in order to meet clients' needs and expectations.

Restoration and infrastructural works also continued at a steady pace in the vaults of the upper courtyard and the arcaded façade of the lower courtyard of the National Museum of Natural History (Vilhena Palace) in Mdina. Refurbishment works are also underway in the Victorian display hall and main reception, including the museum shop area, at Għar Dalam. An application was submitted to the Environment and Resources Authority to replace all the exotic and alien plant species with indigenous ones, and another application was submitted to the Planning Authority to modify the pedestrian access to the museum, with the cooperation of Enemed Co Ltd.

An internal working group composed of representatives of various departments has been set up to design a project for the creation of the Għar Dalam National Heritage Park Project. A management plan was drafted and action is being taken to implement the initial recommendations regarding HM's sites. It is planned that this park would create of a physical link between Għar Dalam, Ta' Kaċċatura and Borg in-Nadur, with Għar Dalam being the starting point and hub of the park. In fact, in order to improve the present conditions of the site, which presently lies in a derelict state and in danger of being lost forever, and to be able to preserve it better for future generations, HM has officially requested the Lands Department for the transfer of title of the Roman Villa of Ta' Kaċċatura under its responsibility.

The intensive restoration programme at the Inquisitor's Palace continued, with resources focused on the courtyard, especially the lateral garden elevation wall which incorporates one of the former external façades of the Magna Curia Castellania building. Apertures within the secondary staircase connecting the two levels of the Ruffo Apartments, overlooking the garden, were reinstated back to their original appearance as constructed by Inquisitor Giorgio Spinola (1703-06), while work in a punitive cell in the prison yard included the reinstatement of the original flooring. The spaces earmarked for the relocation of the costume reserve collection and exhibition halls were refurbished, including the required infrastructural installations.

All remaining carpentry works on the restoration and reconstruction of the Ta' Kola Windmill mechanism were completed, including the installation of the external blades. Pointing works were carried out on the stone fabric of the milling tower, and the project was officially inaugurated on 21 October. A project book was published in conjunction with the project.

Technical studies regarding the best way forward for the conservation of the Xagħra Stone Circle continued. Works at the National Museum of Archaeology included the first phase of the restoration of the façade of the courtyard (Cart Street side), completed in December. Works are also underway for the replacement of the asbestos roofing over the Grand Salon with insulated composite panels, which is also the first intervention in the eventual restoration of the wall paintings and soffit of the Salon itself, which also started by a thorough laser scanning documentation exercise. The lobby area was also refurbished: the previous marble reception desk was dismantled and a new one placed nearer the main door to maximise on the use of space for events and for the museum shop.

In cooperation with the Rural Development Department and the Department of Classics and Archaeology of the University of Malta, HM has also officially requested the transfer of title of the indigenous Bidnija Olive Grove datable to the Roman period, including an adjacent extensive unexcavated Roman structure, which presently lie in a derelict state and in danger of being lost, in order to preserve its unique natural and cultural heritage for future generations. In the meantime two memoranda of understanding are being drafted with the mentioned departments to delineate the administrative responsibilities of all three parties within the project.

The most significant work at the Domvs Romana was the redesign of the entrance area, with a new museum shop display, while the installation of a new electrical system at St Augustine's Catacombs is nearing completion. Since very little conservation works can be carried out at Tas-Silġ before the final reports of the excavations by the Missione Archeologica Italiana are published, HM has sought the help of the Restoration Directorate to restore the dilapidated farmhouse and construct new basic visitor amenities, including the replacement of the wall along the northern side of the public road with a lightweight fence and walkway. Preliminary designs for this work have been finalised and a Planning Application has been submitted. Seven trial trenches were also excavated in the various areas of the site affected by the new project. These were carried out in conjunction with the Superintendence of Cultural Heritage and with the help of volunteers from the Environmental Resources Authority. These excavations produced data required by the project architects to design the new structures but also provided archaeologists with important information on the extent of past excavations and limits of untouched strata.

At the Għajn Tuffieħa Roman Baths, HM started working on draft plans for a smaller project than previously envisaged. In view of this, a large portion of land to the northeast of the site consisting of garigue and a number of fields has been returned to the Lands Department. The so-called British rooms and adjacent caterpillar shelter were retained as part of HM's site. Lease agreements for the official handover from the Lands Department to HM of Borġ in-Nadur, St Augustine's Catacombs and Ta' Bistra Catacombs were finally concluded. A number of internal works were carried out within the chapel of San Pawl Milqi, and plans are in hand for the conservation of the chapel and sacristy, which shall include the reassembly of the original altar of the chapel, and the replacement of the wooden floor with a more permanent solution which includes glass panels, to avoid the need for visitors to go under the current floor.

At St Paul's Catacombs, various pending works were concluded. Conservation works within the catacombs were mostly finished by the start of the year. Other works included the construction of 10 structural pillars to mitigate the serious structural problems within catacomb 5. A number of meetings were held with HM's conservators and scientists to discuss a conservation plan for the Late Roman frescoes found within catacombs 17 and other paintings discovered during cleaning works within other parts of the site. All infrastructural works within each of the catacombs opened to the public were finished and visitor flow is now controlled through a fibreglass walkway and a new lighting system. Visitors can now visit 19 out of the 24 catacombs the site holds.

Catacomb 8 remains closed to the public. The excavations carried out within this catacomb in 2013 have uncovered a large amount of human skeletons which were earmarked for Isotope analysis. Samples have been extracted jointly by the Superintendence of Cultural Heritage and HM, and will be exported for the required tests. In the meantime, the archaeological layers in this catacomb are being backfilled so the required conservation works on the catacomb can be carried out before the walkway is installed and this catacomb is also made accessible to the public.

Environmental monitoring in the various areas of the site was carried out throughout the year. This was the focus of a project by Masters students from the Department of Sustainable Heritage within the University College London. Preliminary results were presented in December and the final report on the findings shall be submitted in April 2017.

Works are also underway in the Hagar Qim and Mnajdra Temples visitor centre, namely the refurbishment of the foyer, including the construction of a site office, a new ticketing desk and museum shop within the existing building. Improvements have also started in the hall which was originally the cafeteria, which is being turned into a multi-purpose hall to accommodate lectures, conferences, workshops and receptions. The maintenance of pathways around the park continued. Following the conclusion of a court case in 2015 which confirmed government ownership of the room between the two temples, the property has been cleaned and restored. The room will have furniture and interpretation so that it can also serve as a starting point for the two walks that guide visitors around the park's landscape, as well as a resting stop.

The refurbishment of the Tarxien Temples visitor centre was concluded with the introduction of information panels, new furniture for the museum shop, and an upgrade of the restroom facilities. The on-site recreational area was also completed and is proving invaluable for school trips and other activities. The outer modern megalithic façade wall was thoroughly cleaned and conserved by the Restoration Directorate. In order to improve accessibility and security at Ta' Hagrat a collapse in the boundary wall was restored, and steps leading from the entrance to the forecourt of the temple were also improved.

As part of ongoing landscaping works in the Ġgantija Temples grounds, extensive rubble wall restoration works were carried out. The irrigation system in the Ġgantija landscaped grounds was reinstalled. A number of fields were topped up with new soil and shrubs were planted along the final length of the pathway before approaching the temples. Following the major infrastructural improvements undertaken, the site was able to host a number of private functions. A process for the transfer of title of a field that provides access to Triq l-Imqades was initiated through the Lands Department in July. The retaining wall of the Ġgantija terrace suffered a collapse in May due to the dry winter experienced at the beginning of this year. The collapse was cleared and the area investigated. Following the submission of a method statement, documentation, survey and the authorisation from the Superintendence of Cultural Heritage, the wall was reconstructed with supporting concrete blocks being integrated in it. The UNESCO Intergovernmental Body Allocation Contract for funds to aid in the Studies for Stabilising the Facade of Ġgantija Temples: Phase 1 – Movement Sensors (US$24,864), was renewed in September and is to be completed by end 2017. In carrying out this exercise for the purchase of movement sensors and the detailed study of the state of conservation of the façade of Ġgantija, HM has engaged the services of Architect Alex Torpiano.

NATIONAL MONUMENTS

In collaboration with the Office of the Prime Minister and the Valletta 2018 Foundation, and as commissioned by the Alfred Mizzi Foundation, the monument in honour of Francesco Laparelli and Girolamo Cassar, located near the new Parliament, was inaugurated on 22 December by the Hon. Prime Minister, as part of the celebrations for the 450th anniversary of the founding of Valletta.

Works on the Artistic Statement to the Maltese Republic are currently on hold in view of the proposal for the development of Lower Fort St Elmo, since the proposed project impacts directly the earmarked location of the said monument. Works on the Monument for the Maltese People, to be located off Castille Square and inaugurated in 2017, are nearing completion, while work on the monument to Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, to be located in Castille Square, are proceeding steadily.

HM and the Grand Harbour Regeneration Corporation, on behalf of the OPM, have also launched a public request for proposals for Artistic expression/s at City Gate, Valletta - <http://www.heritagemalta.org/monuments/>.

HM also provided the required information for the interpretation panels of the following monuments: Sir Paul Boffa, Dr George Borg Olivier, Manuel Dimech, Sette Giugno, Jean de Valette, and Valletta Summit & Malta's Foreign Policy. The Agency also provided the necessary assistance for the installation of the Sette Giugno monument to its original location in St George's Square.

EU CO-FUNDED PROJECTS

The EAFRD M323/12 (REBACA – Rehabilitation of the Roman Baths and Christian Catacombs, c. €2m), focused on the conservation of the Għajn Tuffieħa Roman Baths and the necessary infrastructural works required to render the Ta' Bistra Catacombs (Mosta) accessible to the general public. Works were finalised, and the new walkways and protective shelter were officially inaugurated on 24 June.

Following the completion of the four major ERDF co-funded projects in 2015, namely St Paul's Catacombs, Tarxien Temples, Fort St Angelo and Fort St Elmo, in October HM received the official green light that three other major projects were also awarded ERDF funding, namely:

ERDF 05.019: MUŻA – The National Community Art Museum: Since MUŻA is also the flagship project for the Valletta 2018 capital city of culture, the main works tender was issued and awarded. Mobilisation works have commenced in December and are expected to be completed by early 2017, following the official green light by the Planning Authority in December. On the other hand, the restoration works on the main façade of the Auberge d'Italie overlooking Merchants Street were completed in June with the symbolic relocation of the bust of Grandmaster Gregorio Carafa on the main facade of the building. Nonetheless, the Agency is also currently in discussions with the relevant authorities to increase the ERDF fund for this project from €5 to 10 million.

Works proposed for specific areas within the footprint of the building were also extensively discussed and reviewed. The Renzo Piano Studio was roped in to provide feedback regarding the intervention on the original façade overlooking Pjazza de Valette. The proposed intervention on corridors surrounding the main courtyard was extensively discussed with the Superintendence of Cultural Heritage, but had to be dropped due to stringent deadlines. Plans for the museum shop and back office spaces were also extensively discussed. In the meantime, select areas within the building were scraped from layers of paint in order to determine the extent of required interventions prior to tender issue. The Malta Tourism Authority should be out of the building by February 2017.

Branding and brand book were concluded and are currently being tested. This exercise was undertaken by a multidisciplinary team with the support of the Department for Digital Arts, University of Malta. A call for a strategic partner for MUŻACafe was drafted and published. Pitching sessions were subsequently held in October and two proposals were shortlisted out of a total of six submitted. Results have been published and a way forward is currently being discussed. A call for the development of products inspired by the MUŻA brand and vision has also been issued. Pitching sessions were held and results published. The projects submitted did not meet expectations and a way forward is being discussed. A blog webpage featuring the latest news about the project purposely was also launched.

In the meantime the National Museum of Fine Arts closed its doors for the last time on 2 October, the day after Notte Bianca. A final public event was also held the following week. A virtual rendition of the museum, sponsored by Dhalia Real Estate, has been created, and the entire collection relocated to various temporary storage facilities. The edifice will be handed over to the office of the Attorney General in January 2017.

ERDF.05.022 – The Establishment of a Regional Museum for Gozo: The design competition for the new Gozo Museum at the former Ninu Cremona Lyceum in Victoria, Gozo, was launched on 4 March. Three design submissions were received. A Design Jury made up of various experts, including a foreign expert, convened on 4 May. Following the jury process, the administrative and financial evaluation ensued. The recommendation for award of contract was communicated on 19 July. Nonetheless, the process was halted since an objection was filed by one of the bidders. The appeal is still pending a court decision, expected in January 2017. The report on the proposed museum by Masters' students from the Department of Sustainable Heritage within the University College London was presented in April. In the meantime, the process is ongoing to finalise the ERDF application leading to the formalization of the grant agreement. This project is being managed in collaboration with the MGOZ.

ERDF 05.016 – The Grand Master's Palace Regeneration Project: The grant agreement for the project at the Grand Master's Palace is also being concluded. This project is being led by the Restoration Directorate in close collaboration with HM, and a €10 million budget is also being considered by the authorities in this case. Even though the works can only commence post-September 2017, due to the hosting of the EU Presidency in the first half of 2017, the main service tender was published and is under evaluation. The works envisage the creation of a visitor centre and the re-location of the Knight's Armoury collection from the Palace stables, where it has been exhibited since 1974, to the hall on the Piano Nobile where it had been established by Grandmaster Wignacourt in 1604 (previously the Parliament Chamber). However, with an increased budget, the restoration of extensive areas of the Piano Nobile corridors and halls can also be addressed.

Furthermore, in preparation for the EU Presidency, in collaboration with the GHRC, extensive restoration works were undertaken with respect to most of the marble flooring of the main corridors, the redecoration of the corridor walls in the Piano Nobile, and conservation and redecoration of the wall paintings on the doorway of the Palace Chapel. These works were carried out by private contractors (with supervision and direct assistance of HM conservators) following the publication of three separate requests for quotations. The wrought iron wall sconces which decorated the Palace corridors were replaced with period ones which fit with the corridor's decor, and the adjoining halls refurbished into meeting rooms required during the Presidency. The latter work included the restoration of the three antique crystal chandeliers, restoration and provision of pelmets, advice for the choice of textile for the installation of new curtains and upholstery of historic armchairs. A wrought iron chandelier in one of the former PM's office anteroom was restored, while an antique 19th century crystal gas lit chandelier was bought anew for hanging inside the same office. A series of 27 armorial shields formerly in the Palace Armoury sporting various Malta British Governors' coat of arms were also conserved and fixed to embellish said room.

Folklore Museum/Gran Castello Historic House: Work was mainly focused on the conversion of part of the Folklore Museum into domestic quarters dating to the 18th century. A new lighting system was installed throughout the museum complex, replacing the old system dating to the 1980s. The museum was officially renamed the 'Gran Castello Historic House' and launched when the Ċittadella Restoration project was inaugurated on 30 June. Two levels of the southernmost house forming part of the museum complex were respectively devoted to (a) the serving personnel quarters at ground level, and (b) the family's dwelling quarters at first floor level. The domestic quarters now comprise a reconstructed set-up typical of the 18th century, employing period furniture and related accessories. To complement artefacts already available from the previous display or from the reserve collection, a number of acquisitions were made. As part of the improved visitor experience, twelve infopods with audio-visual content were set up throughout the museum complex. These were funded through ERDF as part of the Ċittadella project. The audio-visual content varies from different aspects of daily life to the urban and rural context in Gozo during the period under consideration. A 3D-model of the Ċittadella as it stood in the late medieval period was separately set up on another screen and was similarly funded through the ERDF.

On the other hand, works with respect to the EEA (Norwegian Funds) Financial Mechanism 2009-14: New Environmental Management System project for the Ħal Saflieni Hypogeum (c. €900,000) proceeded as planned. The condition assessment and biological survey reports were concluded, while the geological survey and the rate of deterioration are ongoing. Following its third issue, the tender for works on site was concluded through a Negotiated Procedure. The site was closed to the public on 7 June and works commenced with the installation of a protective platform over the Upper Level to ensure protection of the original surfaces and to keep the environment of the site relatively stable while the overlying polyurethane sandwich roof is replaced. Work carried out so far includes the removal of old equipment, furniture and services from the site, and commencement of electrical and plumbing works. The steel structure supporting the site's glass enclosure was also stripped from old paint and rust and repainted with intumescent paint.

Another tender was issued to replace two wrought iron drain pipes at a third party property in order to eliminate leakages in this area of the hypogeum. The work will involve the displacement of the tenant living in the related property. Works are still ongoing and scheduled to be completed by mid 2017. In the meantime HM and the Paola Local Council are co-ordinating the pedestrianization of the road leading to the site's entrance. These discussions will also involve Transport Malta and other entities. Until works on the project are ongoing, site PCs were temporarily removed and environmental data is being collected manually on a monthly basis. In addition, air quality within the site is continuously monitored.

In October HM also submitted the following applications for EU-funded projects from the Interreg V Italia-Malta programme:

SPLEAION is a project being proposed by the Phoenician, Roman and Medieval Sites Department and the Natural History Department in collaboration with the Centro Universitario per la tutela e la gestione degli ambienti naturali e degli agro-ecosistemi. This project, with an estimated budget of €2.15M will entail the documentation and studying of seven underground sites (four in Malta and three in Sicily) which are mostly inaccessible to the general public. In Malta, these include the Salini Catacombs, Abbatija tad-Dejr, Għar Mirdum and Għar il-Friefet. The project's main aim is to conduct a number of documentation studies such as 3D modelling and remote sensing with the aim of making these available to the general public through a number of research stations in HM museums. These stations may be used by researchers, scholars and the general public to gather information on these less-known sites, while the studies created will provide the basis for monitoring of these sites by local authorities.

ITINERA aims at developing an 'innovative' and 'inclusive' model in the management of the cultural assets, both the tangible and the intangible. This project, estimated at €1.83M, mainly involves the creation of a virtual museum, via the documentation of a number of sites (and related objects) in Malta and Sicily, with the aim of generating a digital platform for the management and accessibility of these sites, as well as two immersive experiences, one at the National Museum of Archaeology and another at the Parco Archeologico di Agrigento. The immersive experiences will narrate the story of two sister islands, comparing their convergence and divergence, from Prehistory to the Middle Ages.

Moreover, in November HM also submitted three applications for the EEA/Norwegian Financial Mechanisms 2014-21, as follows:

1. Reconstruction of dilapidated parts of the Malta Maritime Museum and enhancement of visitor infrastructure (c. €500,000)
2. Purchase of technical equipment for the setting up of a conservation science laboratory (c. €500,000)
3. Digitization and management of the national collection (c. €1m)

HM is also currently participating in the following EU projects:

MEDIDWARFS PROJECT 2012-2017 – The National Museum of Natural History has for the past four years collaborated with the Natural History Museum of London on a research project to study the fossil mammals from Għar Dalam as part of a broader project on endemic Pleistocene mammals of Mediterranean islands. The research has been funded by the Natural Environment Research Council (UK) and the Leverhulme Trust. Work this year has focussed on elephants and deer, and has revealed the presence of several species of each.

FRAGSUS – HM's participation in the project FRAGSUS, Fragility and Sustainability in restricted island environments: Adaptation, cultural change and collapse in prehistory, continued during this year. Fieldwork was conducted in Skorba, where part of the Għar Dalam phase wall originally excavated by David Trump was uncovered again. Samples for scientific testing were taken from the sections of the trench and the trench was then backfilled. A GNSS setup was acquired which was partly funded by FRAGSUS. This will aid in the identification of remote archaeological site as part of the project. Attempts are currently being made to link the equipment to the national grid reference in order to be able to use the equipment without the need of extensive post processing of the data, thus making the process less time consuming. In February, SCH collected 'Gozo survey' crates with ceramic material from the Ġgantija Finds Hut for study. Backfilling works were carried out on the Ġgantija terrace wall trench in March. The following month, the lower level trench below the temple plaza was reopened. Soil samples were taken for study. Work on the Taċ-Ċawla pottery assemblage commenced, and has so far focussed on desk research on past work on ceramics and a preliminary visual study of some of the material, in order to familiarize with the Taċ-Ċawla assemblage. The Prehistoric Sites Department has also participated in the project's annual meeting and seminars in Cambridge in January of this year, and participated in an introductory course to petrography in Belfast in February.

EXHIBITIONS AND EVENTS

HM's major event during the year under review was undoubtedly the exhibition to commemorate the 450th anniversary of the founding of Valletta, entitled Valletta 1566: Melita Renascens. The exhibition is split up between two different locations, the Vendome Bastion (former National War Museum, Fort St Elmo) and the National Library (Valletta), and will run until July 2017. The two venues complement each other by illustrating thematically various aspects of the life of the city. While the display at the National Library focuses on the 'body' of Valletta (the fortifications, the physical layout and the most prominent buildings), the section at Fort St Elmo concentrates on the city's 'soul': the way of life, important personalities, amenities, recreation, art and crime. The exhibition was also accompanied by the production of a lavishly illustrated catalogue. Other publications on the same theme, including two volumes of collected papers and a children's workbook are in programme for next year.

Apart from the above, during the year under review HM organised, participated in or hosted more than 240 cultural events, including lectures, heritage trails, seminars, temporary exhibitions, re-enactments, and others (Refer to Appendix I – Calendar of Events). Worthy of special mention is the start of the Espresso Exhibition Series – small exhibitions focusing on particularly intriguing artefacts from the National Collection. Four such exhibitions were organised, namely '1. Siege Maps – Keeping Memory Safe', '2. Mattia Preti: Self-Image', '3. Edward Lear in Gozo – 150 Years Later', and '4. Reborn: A Renaissance Painting in Focus'. 1, 2 and 4 were held at the National Museum of Archaeology, the other being held at the Gozo Area Office.

Of particular importance are also the participations in the exhibition 'Valentin de Boulogne: Beyond Caravaggio' held at the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York, the exhibition 'Mattia Preti: Con lo sguardo verso Caravaggio' organised by the Soprintendenza per i Beni Culturali e Ambientali Regione Siciliana at Syracuse, and the exhibition 'Siege Maps: Keeping Memory Safe' in collaboration with the Charles University of Prague and held at the said university. HM also provided its technical assistance and lent artefacts to various local councils and other local associations for the organisation of exhibitions and other cultural activities.

All the museums and sites managed by HM were open free of charge to the public during two open days on 31 January and 8 December. Likewise, admission was reduced to a nominal fee on several occasions in various museums and sites, in particular during the respective cultural events organised by Local Councils such as Birgufest, or free on national events such as the Notte Bianca. Worthy of special mention are the extremely successful 'Mortem' held on 21 February at St Paul's Catacombs, including live re-enactments of a Roman funeral and food inspired by Roman recipes, the open day of Fort St Angelo on 8 September, and the open day of the Conservation Laboratories on 2 November. Ten events were specifically organised for HM members. A number of underprivileged groups were granted free access, while an increasing number of local groups (local councils, parish groups, retired teacher groups, scouts, etc) took advantage of the €1.00 scheme throughout the year.

Ta' Bistra Catacombs and Fort St Angelo officially opened their doors to the general public on 1 October and 1 November respectively, while in March the prehistoric temples of Kordin III became a HM site after its transfer from Fondazzjoni Wirt Artna, and is now open by appointment.

Other progress was registered regarding permanent displays. At the National Museum of Natural History, the Mammals display on the ground floor was dismantled, making way for a new display on Islands and Eco-Systems, covering also endemic and indigenous species. The Molluscs display has been dismantled, refurbished and relocated. Work on new displays on Mammals, Maltese Flora, and Insects is in progress. Additional on-site information panels were added at the Tarxien Temples, where the mobile app launched in January is proving popular with visitors since it enhances the visitor experience by making the site more accessible thanks to its text and audio guide being available in multiple languages. New audio-guides were also launched at the National Museum of Archaeology.

At the Inquisitor's Palace preliminary preparations commenced to implement the interpretive vision whereby a historic house approach will unfold at ground floor, first floor and the prison complex, while ethnographic displays illustrating national religious identity in part resulting from the presence of the Inquisition in Malta will be relocated in the upper floor.

The Malta Maritime Museum started a pilot project of historic dinners based on historically accurate menus following research on artefacts and documents within the museum collection and archives. The menus are intended to give the visitors a different museum experience, an opportunity to taste history. Such menus are prepared on site by qualified chefs. Two pilot dinners were organized in October and November, and both events were very successful.

The communities of Kalkara, Marsa and Gżira participated in the Naqsam il-MUŻA project. Visuals of chosen artworks were displayed in public spaces and videos featuring participants commenting their choice of artwork are being aired on social media. This is a joint project with Valletta2018. The HM Showcase exhibition space in Melita Street was kept functional until June, when the MTA's Tourist Information Office was located there. Exhibitions held during the first half of the year included two curated projects introducing two up-and-coming artists, and three solo shows.

Work is also currently underway for a number of forthcoming initiatives, including exhibitions to be held in Brussels and Rome in 2017 on the occasion of Malta's presidency of the EU, and an exhibition on the Schranz Family of Artists <http://schranz.heritagemalta.org/> in 2018 for Valletta Capital City of Culture.

COLLECTIONS AND RESEARCH

Hundreds of natural specimens and cultural heritage items were acquired for the National Collection during this year. A full list of acquired natural specimens and cultural heritage objects (including purchases, donations and transfers), can be found in Appendix 3 and Appendix 4 respectively.

Worthy of particular mention is the major donation by the renowned folklorist Mr Guido Lanfranco, including 80 original oil paintings by Lanfranco himself between 1975 and 2015 to illustrate Maltese customs and traditions, another set of over 180 drawings depicting Flora, Fauna, Devotion, Superstition and Hope in Maltese Folk Remedies, and 100 cassette tapes and respective transcripts of 1511 radio interviews he documented during the radio programme 'Bejnietna' on RTK radio.

One also has to mention the donations of a silver goblet awarded to Luftwaffe bomber pilot Joachim Helbig, and of an early twentieth century Maltese lace dress by former HM Chairman Mr Joseph Said, the long lost HMS St Angelo ship crest through the Irish Embassy in Malta, a WWI silk souvenir by Dr Giovanni Bonello, a portrait by the artist Carmelo Borg Pisani by Prof Albert Ganado and the donation of over 400 publications/booklets presented by BirdLife Malta.

Moreover, the agency also invested in the National Collection through the direct purchase of a number of objects, the most significant of which are certainly the part of a seventeenth century oil on canvas painting by Mattia Preti 'Apelles Painting Campaspe with Alexander the Great', a decorated silver salver presented as a tribute by the Maltese people to Sir Graham in 1800 for his contribution to uplift the siege of the French in Valletta, and an annotated drawing of Haġar Qim Temples by Edward Lear dated 4 March 1866.

The policy regulating the acquisition of modern and contemporary artworks through Vote 5557 (Contemporary Art Fund) has been reviewed. A number of cultural operators and heritage professionals were invited to review standing policies and procedures. The outcome is an updated policy in line with the vision for MUŻA that seeks to adopt and develop a participatory museum model for the arts. A new practice which this new policy has introduced is external peer review of proposed acquisitions. The acquired works are listed in Appendix 2.

The Collections Management Department continued with its incessant work to catalogue extant collections and newly acquired objects (transfers, donations and purchases), updating of inventories of long-term loaned artefacts in public buildings, checking their state of conservation, and providing artworks as required where possible. Site visits included the Ministry of Home Affairs, the Ministry for Social Dialogue, Consumer Affairs and Civil Liberties, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry for Competitiveness, and the Foundation of Medical Studies. Advice on the display of the historic military exhibits at the AFM Barracks at Luqa was also provided.

The department also continued the registration of conservation projects and recording mobility of collections. New procedures were created for such work. Worthy of mention, apart from the transfer of the Fine Arts collection in view of the museum's closure, is the supervision of the dismantling of the 1970s parliamentary chamber in the Palace and storing of items and furniture that were removed.

This year the unit processed 118 conservation projects as per table below. The decrease in the total number of projects is due to the adoption during 2016 of a single project number for specific collections as to the previous system whereby each individual item, even if it formed part of a collection, was given a separate conservation project number. This new system has drastically cut down on the number of files and paperwork generated by conservation projects.

The Ethnography and Industrial Heritage department benefitted from the help of a student on placement from the Master of Arts programme in Cultural Heritage Management at the University of Malta. She spearheaded Žveljarin – before it's too late, a research project documenting oral tradition concerning traditional trades and other aspects of intangible heritage. The project is still underway.

With respect to the old buses, once HM's primary objective of saving the buses had been achieved, a detailed assessment and technical study was conducted to downsize the fleet to a sustainable number. The selection took into account the minimum necessary to represent a storyline of local bus body-builders and other examples which retain their original foreign body but were modified to the local owners' requirements. As a result of this study, 27 most representative old buses were retained for the national collection. Once these were transferred from the Malta Shipbuilding storage to a recently rented warehouse at Hal Far, HM published an Expression of Interest whereby interested parties could bid for a bus and thus secure its preservation by local enthusiasts and foreign transport and other museums. Two other buses were also transferred to the Health Promotion Department and the Office of the President respectively for alternative public use.

The ongoing documentation and conservation project with customized mounts for the costume collection is nearing completion, and the collection will be shifted back to the new store at the Inquisitor's Palace in 2017. Research into daily life within the Palace progressed with an emphasis on the kitchen area, earmarked for a reconstruction and an engaging experience, with the cooperation of Institute of Tourism, Travel and Culture of the University of Malta. Kitchen equipment was also acquired, backed by research into the 18th century inventories of the Palace.

Work continued on the digital photo-library hosting all the specimens of the natural history collections, including sounds of live specimens, so that eventually they can be made available on-line, as has been done with the ornithological collection. The four volunteers working on the conchological collection compiled an annotated list of Maltese shells for publication. They also presented several specimens of local shells, including species previously not represented in the collection. The annual visits to Filfla were carried out in collaboration with BirdLife Malta; one in March to plot all active Yellow-legged Gull nests, and a second one in late May to ring the young birds. Another visit took place in October to collect data and specimens for the Malta Bio-Databank Proposal 2017-21. An application for a research grant has been submitted to the Leaky Foundation for a detailed study on the four 'Għar Dalam' Taurodont molars. The joint team consists of researchers from HM's NMNH, NHM London, George Washington University USA and the University of Georgia USA. A reply from the Leaky Foundation is expected soon.

HM submitted a joint-application with the Faculty of Science at the Charles University of Prague nominating the four-state series of Great Siege Maps by the Venetian book dealer and publisher, Giovanni Francesco Camocio, for permanent recognition and registering in the UNESCO International Memory of the World Register. The initiative was undertaken with the support of the Ambassador & Permanent Delegate for UNESCO in Malta. The outcome will be communicated in 2017.

Emergency clearing works commenced at the Boiler Workshop, Senglea after the space was transferred to another government entity. The large covered space with five overhead cranes housed a good number of large artefacts of the Malta Maritime Museum dating between the 1870s up to post WWII, mainly from the Naval Dockyard/Malta Drydocks. Works continued uninterrupted throughout the year.

The carrack Sant'Anna model project came to a conclusion after it returned to the Malta Maritime Museum following the Great Siege Exhibition. The last finishing touches, including spars, fixed and running rigging, sails and further flags were concluded. Ing. Joseph Pulè assisted HM's Keeper of Models in this project. With the assistance of Prof Robert L. Dauber HM also embarked on the compilation of a publication on said carrack, to be published in 2018.

In March and April the University of Ghent conducted a major research project with regards to artefacts at the museum which had been retrieved from underwater in 2002. The results of this research will be published in 2018. The museum's principal curator also hosted seventeen programmes about life at sea in the 18th century on Campus FM.

The Scientific Committee for the Conservation of the Megalithic Temples is discussing several studies related to the sheltering of the megalithic temples which are being undertaken by various parties. One of the actions being proposed by the committee is the manual dusting of megaliths at Mnajdra and Ħaġar Qim. Since the installation of the protective shelters, it was observed that more dust is accumulating on the megaliths; this was washed away by rainfall before they were protected by a shelter. This exercise will be undertaken in 2017. Two members of the Prehistoric Sites Department continued their work within the National Steering Committee for UNESCO. A report on progress on the various projects being carried out on the sites included in the World Heritage List shall be submitted to UNESCO in 2017.

As part of its efforts to continue reaching out to the public and making the national collection accessible to all, and following a collaboration project between the National Museum of Archaeology and Prof Bonanno, in November HM launched the website 'Classical Sculpture in the Maltese National Collections' <http://www.heritagemalta.org/classicalsculpture/>, which will serve as a database and discussion platform for Roman sculptures in the national collection.

CONSERVATION

During the year under review, the Conservation Division continued with the incessant process of conservation of items from the National Collection including metal, glass and stone objects, wood, textiles, paintings, books and paper.

Apart from the conservation of paintings for the upcoming MUŻA project and artefacts for the refurbished Gran Castello Historic House, worthy of particular mention is the crucial contribution made by the conservation departments (in collaboration with the Collections Management Department) for the dismantling, packing, transportation, unpacking, and restoring of all objects (on display and in reserve) from the National Museum of Fine Arts to HM's Head Office in Bighi and to other locations as required, until the eventual completion of the MUŻA project at the Auberge d'Italie.

All the departments contributed in various ways towards the necessary conservation works at the Grand Master's Palace in preparation for the hosting of Malta's Presidency of the EU in 2017. Conservators also participated successfully in the presentation and workshop held at the National Museum of Archaeology on 30 September as part of the Science in the City annual event, when an enthusiastic young audience was presented with the methods used for the reconstruction of missing images from paintings and the restoration process of archaeological artefacts. Conservators also proudly explained and presented their professional work during a very successful Open Day of the Conservation Laboratories held on 2 November, which drew hundreds of appreciative visitors. Similar special guided tours of the conservation laboratories were held for HM members on 18 April. The professional direct contribution of conservators was also essential for the setting up of two Espresso exhibitions: 'Mattia Preti Self-Image' and 'Reborn - A Renaissance Painting in Focus'.

Restoration work commenced on twelve mid-19th century wooden Captain's or Admiral's chairs, which were salvaged from the former Naval Dockyard/Malta Dry Docks/Shipyards, and which will be used in the newly upgraded Malta Maritime Museum board room. The Keeper of Models restored eight miniature models of Royal Navy warships forming part of the McGarel Groves donation. Restoration work also commenced on the mid-19th century model of the P&O SS Valletta (1:72).

Conservation works on the plaques commemorating the burial of Sir Ralph Abercrombie at Fort St Elmo started. The 20th century plaque has been removed and is currently awaiting conservation and consolidation. Its removal unearthed the 1800s plaque, which has been cleaned and consolidated until further conservation treatment can be applied. Conservation works on the plaque commemorating the burial of Sir Alexander J. Ball is nearing completion.

The Grand Master's carriage at the Palace Armoury also underwent localised chemical treatment while its pole underwent anoxia treatment to halt infestation. A full conservation treatment will follow. Discussions are also underway with Japanese authorities, facilitated by the Valletta2018 Foundation, regarding the restoration of two or maybe more Samurai armour suit fragments which were once exhibited in the Palace Armoury. Hopefully the armour can be properly studied by foreign experts and eventually restored and exhibited.

The conservation laboratories also hosted and supervised a number of Erasmus programme interns, who besides being given an enriching experience, also gave a most welcome helping hand with the projects in hand. The lists of completed projects per respective department are as follows:

The department is also supervising the conservation and restoration of three paintings by the Mexican artist Morlete Ruiz from San Anton Palace. Work is being carried out by a private contractor following a public call through funds provided by the Office of the President. The same applies for the conservation and restoration of two large paintings 'St Michael' and 'St George' and their frames from the Grand Master's Palace. Above all, the department progressed considerably further in updating the database and inventory of the textile collection and the ongoing Fototeka project at the National Museum of Archaeology. This project also featured in an exclusive event for HM members held on 26 November at the National Museum of Natural History, entitled 'Fototeka, Early Glass Plates: Documenting our Heritage through the Lens'.

DIAGNOSTIC SCIENCE LABORATORIES (DSL)

During the year under review the DSL concluded twenty-two projects, seven of which were HM internal requirements and the other fifteen were external projects, including five external conservation requests, one for private industry, two for the Restoration Directorate and GHRC, and seven for academic support.

In February two EEA financially supported training workshops were held at DSL. The first was tailored to tackle pending advanced issues of XRF interpretation vis-à-vis complexities in materials, while the second was tailored for supportive mechanisms of scientific documentation of works of art by way of technical photography. Both workshops have advanced DSL's technical capabilities in two domains. For XRF, improved signal processing, statistical validation and interpretation has been achieved. For technical photography, a system based on the one utilised during training was procured. With this latter investment, DSL has strengthened its non-invasive arm, since pigments and some other materials can be mapped prior to advancing on analytical strategies. Furthermore, for the very first time in Malta, pigments on surfaces can be mapped, providing visual scientific evidence of the material's application extent. In December, a DSL scientist, also supported by EEA funds visited the University of Bologna Ravenna campus for the training in ATR-FTIR microscope technology, in preparation for the prospective investment for such a much needed system.

The two IAEA National Counterpart representations were returned back to Heritage Malta. A scientist and one conservator have been established in these two positions. The team was immediately put to task by contributing to the next regional technical committee proposal together with Portugal and Hungary. The proposal aims at strengthening cooperation and methodology with respect to nuclear approaches to cultural heritage analytical frameworks.

The DSL was also involved in other initiatives. The collaboration with the Education Department in the form of a series of thematic lectures was continued. In August DSL hosted a group of forty international students from the International Conference of Physics Students, which was held in Malta, to showcase different aspects of applied physics and research by means of its sophisticated instrumentation, which served as a definition of pure engineering manufacture and the role of such instrumentation in the cultural heritage domain. The laboratories also collaborated with PrevArti Ltd for the conservation and historical research of a painting during the production of the television programme Xjenzarti.

EDUCATION, PUBLICATIONS AND OUTREACH

HM was also very active on the education front through the production of specific education programmes and work sheets, and by the organisation of a series of activities including hands-on sessions, drama representations and treasure hunts for school children, and others attending Skolasajf.

This year saw a continuation of the thematic cross curricular programme of activities which started being delivered in a number of sites and museums at the start of the scholastic year 2015/16. The focus of these activities is one based on the Outcomes and Outputs of the National Curriculum Framework. The aim is to change the perception that a visit to a museum is a mere day out of school. Each thematic activity is focused on a particular event or period in history which students are taught about in class, so that the visit to the museum becomes a directly relevant and important part in the learning experience. As much as possible the activities are programmed in such a way so as to coincide with the particular time when that specific aspect of history is being taught. For students to garner maximum benefit a pre- and post-museum visit preparation is being encouraged. Through the museum visit students were also allowed to interact more fully with the primary sources referred to in their textbooks. Since most activities are cross curricular in nature, the fluidity and interconnection between different subject matters is evidenced.

As an integral part and follow-up of last year's education programmes focusing on the 450th anniversary of the Great Siege, on 10 June took place the official launch of the publications L-Assedju l-Kbir Farka Farka and its English translation A Bird's Eye View of the Great Siege. Both publications were produced by HM and published in collaboration with the Department of Curriculum Management within the Ministry of Education. Copies of these publications will be distributed to all Year 6 students next year.

Activities were open to all schools, and over the scholastic year the Agency has offered activities that could be followed by every level, from kindergarten to post secondary. Thematic programmes were specifically developed for students that fall within the Core Curriculum Programme. However, keeping firmly in mind that everyone has different learning abilities and skills, HM started diversifying the activities with the aim of reaching out to students who have different abilities and challenging backgrounds. In fact other programmes targeted students who attend the Helen Keller Resource Centre. The special programme organised at St Paul's Catacombs was in fact a great success and merits particular mention. The success of both programmes have encouraged the Education Unit to re-offer the programme in the coming year and to open it up to more schools whose students face similar challenges. The full list of organised programmes is included in Table 2 hereafter.

We also cooperated with the Ministry of Education in other initiatives such as the organisation of in-service courses for history teachers. Career orientation programmes and participation in career counselling events are being given the appropriate attention with a more diverse and targeted programme aiming to fulfil the scope of such internships being developed. An average of two classes per month were offered career orientation visits at the Conservation Laboratories, while job exposure week-long placements at Head Office and various sites were offered to Kirkop Boys Secondary and Handaq Girls Secondary in November and December.

Another particular event, which to all intents and purposes was a 'first' for the Agency, was the workshop organised on 14-21 October to celebrate World Sight Day in collaboration with the Parliamentary Secretariat for the Rights of People with Disabilities at the Għajnsielem Learning Hub, Gozo, where models of prehistoric temples and other replicas were offered for a special tactile experience to people with visual difficulties.

A total of 48,877 students and accompanying adults visited HM museums and sites as part of their curricular needs or during extra-curricular activities as per Table 3 opposite page.

PUBLICATIONS

During the year under review the Publications Department awarded particular attention to the consolidation of its efforts on the publishing front in a bid to valorize and democratize in a more effective way the cultural resources in the Agency's care.

Besides producing two more volumes in the Project Book Series, two issues of its biannual journal (Tesserae), and a lavish catalogue in connection with the exhibition commemorating the 450th anniversary of the foundation of Valletta, three new series of publications have been launched.

The first consists of the Monograph Series (in-depth studies on particular aspects of Maltese heritage). The first title in this series is entitled In the name of the Prince: Maltese Corsairs 1760-1798, and focuses on the vast depositary of information found within HM collections and archives. The first edition, launched on 24 February at the Malta Maritime Museum, sold out within the first few months and another print run was ordered in October. The second is the Proceedings/Collected Papers Series, which was started with the publication of the proceedings of the conference organised by HM at the Aula Magna of the University of Malta in 2013. It is entitled Caring for Our Heritage: Conference Proceedings, and was launched officially at the National Museum of Archaeology on 8 July. The third is the Espresso Series (high end brochures relating to more intimate and focused exhibitions).

Special mention must also be made of the collaboration with other prestigious stakeholders including the University of Malta, the National Library of Malta and the Akkademja tal-Malti in the publication of the earliest known and monumental dictionary of Maltese: Damma tal-Kliem Kartaginis mscerred fel Fom tal Maltin u Ghaucin, which was also a major hit with the general public.

All publications were presented with great success in the annual national Bookfest in November, during which HM was represented for the fourth year running. Meanwhile, a significant amount of preparatory work has been carried out in connection with the production of several titles and the development of new series due in 2017.

OTHER CORPORATE

HM has started reaping the benefits of the investment in ICT systems to meet the demands of the ever changing external operational environment especially regarding an integrated software for financial management, coupled with turnstiles, CCTVs, new Point of Sale systems integration, and the introduction of electronic payment to suppliers. Furthermore, the stores function was separated completely from the procurement section, resulting in two separate procurement arms: one replenishes items used on a day-to-day basis and the gift shop store that replenish museum shops, while the other issues purchase orders and vets requests being made have the necessary approvals and quotations. A new procurement policy for the entire agency was also drafted and will be implemented in 2017, also in view of the new government procurement legislation. The proposed changes will not only improve the entire purchasing process, but also ensure that there is more accountability and transparency.

Procedures covering museum shops stock and procurement from stores were consolidated, audit systems within museums were reviewed, staff was trained on a new point-of-sale system, the rosters of Malta and Gozo were combined to maximise resources, and a simpler price structure introduced.

All activities were very actively publicised on all media: 35 press releases were issued, 39 appearances on television programmes, 38 interviews on radio programmes, 52 articles on magazines, 198 online articles, and 10 press conferences, while 86 requests for filming and 145 requests for photography by the Malta Tourism Authority were processed. The number of page views of the official HM website continued to increase and exceeded the 1,800,000 mark (1,489,663 in 2015). Likewise, the official HM Facebook page (16,211 Likes) and Group (5,599 members) have also registered very encouraging results and are proving to be very effective to reach out to our audiences. HM has also investigated the use of Google Ad Words and Facebook advertising and so far the results are extremely encouraging. In one particular case, the Valletta 1566 video advert generated over 35,000 views on YouTube in one week. HM intends to continue exploring this advertising medium.

HM also developed a new website promoting the hire of HM venues in various museums and sites <http://www.heritagemalta.org/venues/>. The Membership Scheme was revamped with revised rates and increased benefits to all members, and officially launched on 2 November. Previously on 23 September HM also launched a new HM student scheme, granting free access to HM museums and sites to all primary school children, and a 50% discount to any two accompanying adults. This scheme was devised with the cooperation of the MJCL and MEDE. The response so far has been extremely encouraging, with over seven thousand applying for this card.

Throughout the year HM concluded a number of agreements with stakeholders on various fronts, thus enabling it to reach out better to all its audiences, diversify and improve its various services. The following are worthy of particular mention. On 16 March HM and the University of Malta signed a memorandum of understanding focusing on mutual cooperation regarding equipment and technical assistance, staff training, student academic support, and research. Intensive discussions were held with MCAST regarding the setting up and launching of a course focusing on cultural heritage skills. On 8 September HM also signed a management agreement with the Sovereign Military Order of Malta for making the upper part of Fort St Angelo (managed by the Order) accessible to the general public through the provision of daily guided tours at an extra charge. Such tours were started on 5 December. Another agreement was reached with Google Street View & Google Cultural Institute to digitize archaeological sites, the buildings hosting museums and their contents and providing an online platform to upload cultural assets for display on the Internet. A sponsorship agreement was also signed with Dhalia Real Estate Services to digitize museums and sites and present a 360 degree navigable model of the spaces on the internet (<http://heritagemalta.org/museums-sites/the-inquisitors-palace/>).

We have capitalized on sponsorships and monetary donations, which have been used for further capital works and other projects such as the Malta Maritime Museum bell project, 3D documentation of the Grand Salon of the National Museum of Archaeology, the MUŻA furniture restoration project, and the Għar Dalam regeneration project.

HM also introduced an electric car service between Ħaġar Qim and Mnajdra Temples through a third party operator. This has proved to be very effective and led to an increase of 15% visitors to Mnajdra compared to the previous year.

HM also launched, through its Business Development Unit, the commission agents system whereby tour guides and other operators have been granted special prices and commissions on sale of tickets to specific sites. This system shall be improved and fine-tuned during the coming year in order to generate more admissions in HM sites.

Nine HM sites have received the renowned Certificate of Excellence for 2016, while two of the sites also received The Travellers' Choice Award by TripAdvisor, the world's largest travel site. HM has in fact received such certificates for some of its sites for the last four consecutive years. The National War Museum, the Ғal Saflieni Hypogeum, the National Museum of Archaeology, Mnajdra Temples, Ғaġar Qim Temples, Ġgantija Temples, the Malta Maritime Museum, St Paul's Catacombs, and Fort St Elmo have received the Tripadvisor Certificate of Excellence, which is awarded only to establishments that consistently achieve outstanding traveller reviews on TripAdvisor. The Ғal Saflieni Hypogeum and Ғaġar Qim Temples also received The Travellers' Choice Award.

The museum shops performance was once again encouraging. For the first time HM introduced a number of agency branded merchandise and food and beverage items. These new additions to the product mix and to the publications proved that museum shops are indeed an important source of revenue to the Agency, while providing an expected service and improving the overall visitor experience. HM, through its Business Development Unit, has developed a number of merchandise which is on sale exclusively from its museum shops. These include a number of food products from Għar Dalam, stationery, coaster sets, branded mugs, colouring booklets for children, figurines featuring soldiers of the Order of St John, and others. The Agency has also introduced a Museum Shop Development task force in charge of reviewing present experience and with the remit of proposing improvements to the display, products, signage etc. Collaboration with third party retailers improved and HM is selling its merchandise and publications in various locations. Encouraging results have also been achieved through the online shop on <http://www.heritagemalta.org/shop> - another way for HM to increase accessibility to its publications and museum merchandise.

Besides the technical training for the Diagnostic Science Laboratories mentioned above, during the year under review HM staff also benefited from training and professional development. A self-motivation training session for all management staff was held in January, customer care and team building sessions were held in March and April, and first aid sessions were held in July and August. Three workshops on business planning, entrepreneurship and stakeholder modelling were organised in collaboration with St Martin's Institute of Higher Education in August and September. Many other members of staff attended conferences and specific courses relevant to their respective responsibilities, while others still benefited from various forms of assistance to further their studies. HM also provided much appreciated museum-related experience to 74 interns from all over Europe, and hosted students from the Institute of Tourism Studies and from the Department of Tourism Studies of the University of Malta as part of their course studies.
