

Sensory Friendly map of the National Museum of Archaeology

for visitors on the Autism Spectrum and visitors with Sensory Processing Disorder

Preparing for your visit

There are some spaces within the museum that might be overstimulating for people on the Autism Spectrum or are sensitive to lights, sounds and smells; these spaces are indicated in the following pages. Additional information can also be found in the museum's Social Story.

Should you prefer to visit on quieter, less crowded days we suggest you visit during the museum's dedicated Autism Friendly hours; These are found on the Heritage Malta website. You may also wish to avoid open days.

Should you require further information, please do not hesitate to contact us. Contact details can be found in the last page.

In addition, please note that the museum is fully accessible to visitors with mobility impairments.
